PORTFOLIO COMPOSITION

OUTLOOK

As of late September 2025, the major influence on money market fund returns was the declining interest rate environment. The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) had been consistently cutting its Target Reverse Repurchase (RRP) Rate throughout 2025, reaching 5.00% by the end of Q3. Since money market funds invest in short-term debt, these lower policy rates translate directly to lower yields or slower growth for the funds compared to the higher-rate environment of the preceding year.

This easing cycle was supported by a stable and non-threatening inflation picture, with headline inflation in September 2025 at 1.7%, which is below the BSP's target range. Low inflation gave the central bank the flexibility to continue cutting rates to stimulate economic activity. The primary role of money market UITFs—as a low-risk, highly liquid investment vehicle remains unchanged and highly attractive. The strategy for investors is to use it as a highly liquid safe harbor, while being prepared for a gradual decrease in yields, ahead of the anticipated rate cuts.
