RISKS SPECIFIC TO THE TARGET FUND

Further to the general risks above, the following risks are specific to the Target Fund:

Emerging Markets Risk:	The Target Fund may invest in developing countries and emerging markets may involve increased risks including without limitation (i) investments and repatriation restrictions, (ii) currency fluctuations, (iii) the potential for unusual market volatility as compared to more industrialized nations, and (iv) certain local tax law considerations.
Distribution Risk:	Dividend/interest income of the Target Fund may be adversely affected by investee entities suffering unexpected losses and/or paying lower than expected dividends, and adverse currency exchange rate fluctuations.
Derivatives Risk:	The Target Fund may use Financial Derivatives Instruments including options, swaps, forwards and futures. Risks include default by the counterparty or the inability to close out a position because the trading market becomes illiquid.
Currency Risk:	Fluctuation in foreign currency exchange rates will affect the value of the Fund's investments when converted into the currency of denomination of the Fund and subsequently the value of Holders' investments. The Target Fund may use foreign currency forwards to hedge the foreign currency exposure in full or partially, and may actively manage such exposure. The fund can buy USD or non-USD denominated bonds.
Inflation Risk:	Inflation is a long term risk as it creates uncertainty over the future value of the investments. In an inflationary environment, a return on investment which is lower than the inflation rate will lead to a loss of purchasing power of the currency of the Units held by a Holder. For example, in fixed coupon that investors receive will be worth lesser in high inflation environment.
Early Redemption Risk:	This Fund is not meant for short term investment. Early redemptions by investors may reduce the probability that the investment objectives of the Fund will be met.
Large Redemption Risk:	The fund is an open ended fund. There can be periods when the Fund may receive large redemption notices from investors. The large size of redemption may lead to the possibility of selling the Fund's investments below the respective last marked to market prices especially during period of low market liquidity. Therefore, such events would be detrimental to the investors.
Company Specific Risk:	Specific risks to securities issued by a company apply as there are adverse conditions or negative sentiments which a company can be uniquely exposed to, be it from the view of management issues, deteriorating business fundamentals or losing competitiveness. As a consequence, the price of securities issued by such company might fall and subsequently affect the Fund's performance.
Counterparty Risk:	This fund invests into Asian bonds which are normally traded over-the-counter. It will expose the Fund to the risk that a counterparty may default on its obligations to perform under the relevant contract. If a counterparty becomes bankrupt or insolvent, the Fund could experience delays in liquidating an investment and may therefore incur significant losses, including losses resulting from a decline in the value of the investment during the period in which the Fund seeks to enforce its rights. The Fund may also be unable to realize any gains on the investment during such period and may incur fees and expenses to enforce its rights.
Country Risk:	The investments of the Fund may be affected by risks specific to the country in which it invests. Such risks include changes in a country's economic, social and political environment. The value of the assets of the Fund may also be affected by uncertainties such as currency repatriation restrictions or other developments in the law or regulations of the country in which the Fund invests into.

OUTLOOK

We had witnessed global financial markets capitulation since President Trump unveiled his extensive trade tariffs plans on Liberation Day 2nd April. The tariffs are on a country-by-country basis and it covers basic 10% and additional reciprocal tariffs based on trade gap with the US. China by far was hit the highest with 54% but the rest of the world was not spared too. On average, the rest of the world is facing potentially US trade-weighted tariffs amounting to 23%, which is much higher than market expectations of 10% to 15% expected prior to the announcement. Expectations of US recession and stagflation increased from 20% to as high as 60%. As of 7th April, interest rate futures are pricing in four cuts by end FY2025 which is more dovish than the two to three cuts expected a month ago.

Risk assets such as equities, commodities and crypto sold off heavily. Even US Treasuries was sold down as markets worry about inflation, basis trades unwind by selling cash Treasuries as well as concerns that USD may lose its status as the reserve currency of the world. We have also witnessed early signs of the credit bubble bursting. The US high yield credit spreads have widened more than 150bps from the recent tight of 300bps mid February to current 468bps as of 7th April. This is in line with our FY2025 outlook where we expected credit spreads to widen and Treasuries to outperform credit. While we had expected credit spreads to widen as they were too tight versus historical levels, the recent speed and magnitude of this unravelling was worse than our expectations.

At the time of writing in mid-April, the bond portfolio is underweight duration by 0.7 years versus the index. We are overweight US Treasuries versus corporates and have cash equivalents of about 20%. President Trump on 10th April announced a 90-day pause on the reciprocal tariffs and only a 10% flat rate is in effect for now. However, US further increased the tariffs on China to 145% due to their retaliatory actions. As nations enter into trade negotiations with the US, it is still very uncertain how this macro-political risk can unravel. We continue to be defensive and keep cash for future trading opportunities.
